“ My first memory of Uncle Lyndle was when I was very young at a family Christmas party. He and my Uncle Bob Marsh were involved in a heated argument. That's when I learned that he had strong opinions and was willing to defend them. In my 60 years since then my opinion of him never changed. So I made sure that most of our conversations had to do with his Naval experiences and family matters, both past and present. Over the years, we enjoyed getting together to talk about mutually agreed topics. I'll miss those discussions.

Donna and I send our sympathies out to the family and friends who will miss him.
